'Why eat ethically (or do anything ethically)?'

Dr Nathan Tamblyn

Associate Dean for Undergraduate Studies in the Faculty of Law
The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Date: 16 October 2013 (Wednesday)

Time: 1:30 pm to 2:30 pm

Venue: Lecture Theatre 4, THEi Building

Abstract

We eat food three times a day. The choices we make have enormous consequences: for plants, for animals, for the environment, for residents, for workers, for consumers, for the poor - the ripples of our choices circle the whole world. What food choices should we make? Why should we care about making the right food choices? Why should we care about making the right choices about anything?

Bio-note

Dr Nathan Tamblyn is Associate Dean for Undergraduate Studies in the Faculty of Law of the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He took his undergraduate degree at Oxford, and his master's and doctoral degrees at Cambridge. He practised as a barrister in London before pursuing an academic career, teaching first at Cambridge before moving to Hong Kong. His research interests are ethics, philosophy, and the law of obligations.
